The mission to evangelize

Twitter, Facebook, You Tube, Blogs, mobile phones... and other digital wonders of this century repeatedly remind us of the human hunger for communion and communication. Humans are born social beings and communication is the lifeline of the modern human. We feel the need to get in touch and stay in touch throughout our lives on planet Earth. We collaborate all the time, naturally.

The Church of God also responds powerfully to this human need of reaching out to the other and wanting to live together in community. The very definition of Church as a people of God indicates such an openness, inclusiveness, a sharing attitude. She invites all women and men of good-will to be part of her mission. The mission to "Evangelize" is none other than the mission to bring the Good News of the love of God to the diverse peoples of our world. Jesus, during his life on this earth preached the Good News of God's love and vividly gave an example of this love through his life, and death on the cross.

Pope Francis has repeatedly stressed that the Church needs to continue this mission of God's love for His people, especially the poor and the suffering of this world. He himself has demonstrated of his personal care for the sick and the suffering and his love for the prisoners. Thus, each one of us is challenged by the message and the example of the Holy Father to share in this mission. The mission is enormous, given the reality of our suffering world today. Therefore, collaboration between Priests, Religious and the Lay people becomes all the more significant in promoting the mission of God.

This mission is a challenge to all of us: Priests, Religious and Lay People to collaborate in our parishes, schools and institutions on projects that specifically reach out to the suffering and the poor. Thus, the experience of the love of God becomes a live experience, an experience which transforms each one of us. (Fr. Anthony da Silva, SJ)

Thoughts of St. Ignatius of Loyola

- * Never say or do anything until you have asked yourself whether it will be pleasing to God, good for yourself, and edifying to your neighbour.
- * He who wants to do great things in God's service must beware above all else not to be too clever.
- * Prudence belongs not to the one who obeys command, but to the one who gives it.
- * In a house that is well ordered the elders should live the life of the young, the younger the life of the mature, so that the former may display the keenness of youth, the latter the judgment of full age.
- * Better great prudence and ordinary holiness than great holiness and little prudence.
