Sport - a modern 'Court of the Gentiles'

For the Catholic Church, "the joys, hopes, sorrows and anxieties of the men and women of today, especially of the poor and suffering, are the joys, hopes, sorrows and anxieties of Christ's disciples. Indeed there is nothing truly human which does not find an echo in his heart".

This beautiful teaching of Vatican Council II (GS 1) also applies to sport. As Pope Benedict XVI once said to an Olympic committee (17/12/2012), the Church is interested in sport because she is concerned with the whole human person, recognizing the effect of sporting activity on the person's formation, relationships and spirituality. That is why so many Catholic institutions have sports grounds.

Every sporting activity, the Pope goes on, demands loyalty in competition, respect for one's own body, a sense of solidarity, and leads to joy and festivity. Sport is an educational and cultural good, in which human beings are revealed to themselves, and understand the deep value of their lives. It is also a modern 'Court of the Gentiles', or a precious opportunity for meeting between different types of persons, believers and unbelievers, in which it is possible to experience the joy and challenge of sharing life with different cultures, languages and religions.

An athlete, who lives his or her experience to the full gives attention to God's designs for their life, learns to hear God's voice in the long periods of training, to recognize him in the team-mate's face, and the face of the opponent in the contest.

Sport has always been part of my life, and in my adolescence, surfing. When I became a priest I went to live by the coast, and returned to surfing. As it was not usual for a priest to engage in this sport, the fact was immediately noted in the press. It was a good opportunity to show the human side of the priest, who can do sport just like any other person. The beach and the sea are an opportunity to meet people beyond the parish boundaries. The fascinating beauty of the sea, the force of its waves and its infinite immensity evoke the grandeur of God, creator of everything. The peace and the sense of well-being given by sport in the sea are a blessing from the Lord, who wants our good.

Four Saints you can pray to so that your soccer team wins

Some months ago, this picture of a Spanish soccer fan made the front pages. It shows a girl wearing the flag of her soccer team, Atletico de Madrid, praying that they would win final game of a competition. And so they did. It's normal to see soccer fans and players praying. Most of them make the sign of the cross before entering the soccer field. But, who can you pray to so that your team wins?

The patron saint of sports is Italian Saint Pier Giorgio Frassati. He was a brilliant student who was an avid hiker. Every time he organized a trip to the mountain, playing a soccer game was part of the plan.

Another Italian is the patron saint of soccer: Luigi Scrisoppi. He is usually depicted with a ball in his hand. He was known for his dedication to youth through sport.

Saint John Bosco was also proposed to be the patron saint of soccer players. The character of this famous Italian educator had everything needed to enjoy soccer: youth, joy and friendship.

Pope John Paul II is considered to be the patron saint of goalkeepers. Young Karol Wojtyla would keep this position when he played soccer in his hometown, Wadowice. As Pope, he highlighted the importance of sport and kept practicing it.

Each profession has its mediator. And even though what matters the most in soccer is training, an extra help is always appreciated.

Thoughts of St. Ignatius of Loyola

* To do many things and to mix with many people, yet not to turn aside from either God or oneself, is a great and rare art.

* It is stupid to neglect an immediate opportunity of serving God in the hope of doing something greater in future: for it may well be that you will lose the one without gaining the other.

* When the devil instills into your mind mean and petty thoughts, turn your memory to the benefits God has shown you in times past.
