Pope Francis:

Human trade a disgrace to our societies

Pope Francis has said that human trade is a "vile activity, a disgrace to our societies that claim to be civilized. Exploiters and clients at all levels should make a serious examination of conscience both in the first person and before God". For this reason, he added, "today the Church is renewing her urgent appeal that the dignity and centrality of every individual always be safeguarded, with respect for fundamental rights".

Why is the Pope so concerned about the issue of human trafficking? Why has he used such strong expressions on numerous occasions, calling it "a crime against humanity" and "a social plague of our times", in addition to the eloquent appeals we read in this section of our reflections?

There is no lack of reasons. The figures of this modern slavery are bloodcurdling. There are 20.9 million adults and children in the world who are subject to forced labour or prostitution. Human trafficking is worth around 32 billion dollars a year, the same amount generated by weapons smuggling. Ninety-eight percent of the victims of the illegal sex trade are women and young girls.

There are three kinds of human trafficking:

- For sexual exploitation (79 percent)
- For forced labour (18 percent)
- For organ transplants (3 percent)

The Pope calls upon us to commit to the struggle to eradicate this evil and help to restore the dignity of those who have been violently deprived of their right to happiness.

What can we do to counteract human trafficking?
Three things we can do are:

- Help to raise awareness, educate society and talk about the issue, especially to healthcare personnel and the police.
- Shelter, protect and assist the victims, if the occasion arises.
- Advocacy: influence our society to change and to enforce existing laws.

The Apostleship of Prayer commits to working together with the Pope in harmony with this great concern in his heart.
