Pope Francis:

Build bridges of peace, not walls of distance

The path of peace begins, with dialogue. But, dialogue is not easy, it is difficult. And yet, it is only "with dialogue that we build bridges of peace in relationships rather than walls that distance us".

"For dialogue to occur, what we need above all else is humility. We don't need to raise our voice in order to dialogue; "what we need is meekness". And "we need to consider that the other person has something more that we don't". We need to do what we prayed for in the opening of Mass: become all things to all".

"Humility, meekness, becoming all things to all" are three basic elements of dialogue. However, the Holy Father noted, even though "it is not written in the Bible, to do this we have to eat a lot of crow: yet we must do it because that's how peace is made!" Peace is made "with humility and humiliation", by seeking always to "see in the other person the image of God". Solutions to so many problems are found "through dialogue in families, in communities, in all quarters". It requires a readiness to acknowledge to another person: "But listen, excuse me, this is what I thought..."

The right attitude is "to humble oneself: it is always good to make a bridge, always, always!". This is in keeping with the manner of someone who wants "to be Christian"; even if, as the Pope admitted, "it is not easy, it is not easy!". And yet "Jesus did this, he humbled himself unto the end, he showed us the way".

The Pope then offered another practical piece of advice: to open up dialogue "we need to not allow too much time to pass". Problems should be addressed "as soon as possible, at the first possible opportunity once the storm has passed". Right away, we need "to draw near in dialogue, because time makes walls grow, as it makes weeds grow and impede the growth of the wheat. Once walls have grown, reconciliation is so difficult; it is so difficult!".

The Bishop of Rome made reference to the Berlin Wall, which for many years had been an element of division, and he noted that the possibility "also exists in our hearts" of becoming like Berlin, of putting up a wall against others. Hence the Holy Father's invitation "not to let too much time pass" and "to seek peace as soon as possible".

In particular, the Pope wished to speak to spouses: "It is normal for you to argue, it is normal". Seeing a smile from several couples who were present at morning Mass, he reminded them that "in marriage there are arguments, and sometimes even plates go flying".

However, he advised, "never end the day without making peace; without talking, which sometimes only takes a small gesture". "I am afraid of these walls that grow each day and breed resentment and even hatred," the Pope said.

Pope Francis concluded by asking "St Francis di Sales, the Doctor of gentleness and sweetness" to give "all of us the grace to build bridges with others, and never walls" (24 January 2014).
