Pope Francis:

Lord, help young people to be free, not slaves

Pope Francis reflected on the day's Gospel from St Mark (10:17-27), in which the evangelist recounts Jesus' calling of the rich young man. The man ran up to Jesus and knelt before him. And he does so before a great crowd because he greatly desired to hear Jesus' words and something in his heart was prompting him. Thus, kneeling before him, he asks him what he must do in order to inherit eternal life. Indeed, he was a good man, for he observed the commandments from his youth. However, for him, being good did not suffice: he wanted more! The Holy Spirit was urging him on.

Jesus fixed his gaze upon him, happy to hear these things. So much so that the Gospel tells us that he loved him. Therefore, Jesus also sensed his enthusiasm. And this is what he proposed: sell what you have and come with me to preach the Gospel! However, the evangelist tells us that at that saying his countenance fell, and he went away sorrowful.

This good man had come with hope and with joy to see Jesus; he asked his question; he listened to Jesus' words; and he made his decision: to go away. Thus the joy that moved him, the joy of the Holy Spirit, was turned into sadness.

The problem was that his restless heart, which the Holy Spirit was prompting to draw near to Jesus and to follow him, was a heart that was full. Yet he did not have the courage to empty it and instead, he chose money! He was not a thief or a criminal. He was a good man. He never stole or cheated. He was honest money but his heart was imprisoned by it, he was attached to money and he didn't have the freedom to choose. Therefore, in the end, money chose for him.

There are many young people today who feel this call. But when their hearts are filled with something else, and because they are not courageous enough to empty them, they turn back. And thus their joy is turned to sadness.

When we ask the Lord to send vocations to proclaim the Gospel, he sends them. And yet some say: Father, things in the world are going so badly: there are no vocations to be a sister, there are no priestly vocations, we are going to end in ruin!

There are many vocations. Yet, if they are so numerous why do we need to ask the Lord to send them? We need to pray that the hearts of these young people might be emptied: emptied of other interests, emptied of other loves, that their hearts might become free. This is the true prayer for vocations: Lord, send us sisters, send us priests; defend them from the idolatry of vanity, from the idolatry of pride, from the idolatry of power, from the idolatry of money. And our prayer helps to prepare their hearts: Lord, help these young people to be free and not to be slaves so that they might have a heart only for you. (Morning meditation of Pope Francis, 3 march 2014).
